Color Maryland Green Contest Deadline Is March 13

Students in Kindergarten through 12th grade are invited to submit entries to the annual Color Maryland Green contest.

Maryland's Departments of Natural Resources and Education hold this annual contest to encourage students to celebrate Maryland's outdoors and natural resources.

Young poets, artists, photographers and producers can submit their work. They will be judged in various categories - K-grade 2, grades 3 to 6, grades 7 to 9 and grades 10 to 12, with the video category covering all ages.

Poems can be up to 32 lines long and must fit on an 8.5-inch by 11-inch piece of paper. Photos have to be at least 8 inches by 10 inches. All artwork cannot exceed 11 inches by 17 inches. Videos must be at least 30 seconds, but no more than two minutes.

The back of each entry must have the entry form attached and be labeled with the name of the student, school, grade, city and state.

All work must be the original work of the students. No photocopies of work will be accepted.

Entries must be postmarked by March 13.

For more information, go to dnr.state.md.us/education/cmng\_about.asp. Entries will be mailed to Maryland Department of Natural Resources c/o Color Maryland Green Contest, 1580 Taylor Ave. D4 Annapolis, MD 21401.

New Maryland Planning Secretary Is Confirmed

It is official. Harford County's former County Executive David Craig is the new Secretary of Maryland's Department of Planning (MDP).

Craig's confirmation to the post was made official last Friday.

The new Secretary could make a big difference for Cecil County officials. The county has been at odds with state agency bureaucrats for several years. Most recently, the county administration has been trying to deflect the heat from the MDP because of the Tier Map issue. County Executive Tari Moore submitted a required Tier Map to the state that appears to meet the letter of the law, but was severely criticized by MDP folks because it only placed the most restrictions on development in the county on land that was already in land conservation programs or existing parkland.

Secretary Craig is quite familiar with Cecil County. When he visited Cecil during his primary campaign for Governor, Craig told the "Cecil Guardian" that he can trace his roots into Cecil County.

Craig has lived in Harford County for decades. His political career started in Havre de Grace where he served on the City Council and was the town's Mayor. He has been both a State Delegate and State Senator. Craig was elected County Executive in 2005 - a post he held for nearly a decade.

He has chaired the Baltimore Metropolitan Council Board, is a past president of the Maryland Association of Counties and past president of the Maryland Municipal League.

Craig balanced his political career with a career in education. He worked in Harford County schools as a history teacher and then as a middle school assistant principal.

Artesian Officials Make Courtesy Call To Elkton Town Officials

There was no agenda, no contract negotiations - just some hellos and a couple of comments as top officials from Artesian Water visited last week's Elkton town workshop.

Company CEO Dian Taylor and VP Joseph Di Nunzio, joined by a couple other Artesian officials, said they were just at the meeting to give their regards to the town.

The town and Artesian have a contract that brings Artesian Water into town. The contract runs until 2019. A possible future contract has yet to be negotiated.

Mayor Rob Alt said the agreement is an important interconnect for the town in that it provides extra water for the town, if needed. Alt was not in office when the contract with Artesian was signed. He said he would like to see the guaranteed level of water purchased from Artesian to be reduced.

Alt also noted that he wished Artesian would have been part of the recent discussions among county officials and the towns of Elkton, North East and Perryville concerning water franchises, service areas and future town growth.

"I was hoping you would have been there," Alt said to the Artesian top brass.

"I wasn't invited," Di Nunzio said, noting that Artesian is committed to serving the county and that many Artesian associates have an interest in the county because they are Cecil County residents.

Alt said county officials asked him how far Elkton would like to annex.

"I told them as far as we could annex," Alt said, explaining that adding to the town is the best way for the town to survive fiscally.

Taylor noted the town had reduced water rates to customers.

Alt said that he and the town commissioners agreed there was a way to lower the costs to customers.

"You could help us meet our goals," Alt said, coming back to his wish to lower mandatory water purchases from Artesian.

But town officials also said they value the partnership with Artesian. Town administrator Lewis George noted how Artesian experts helped the town with recent technical issues with their water utility system.

"If there are issues, let's solve them," Di Nunzio said.

"I think we should start some discussions soon," Mayor Alt said.

Truck Restriction Is Approved For Kirk Road

Sharp turns on a section of Kirk Road has meant that large trucks have gotten stuck along the roadway.

County officials agree that it is the length, not weight of trucks that is making travel along the roadway hazardous, but the county's Department of Public Works said the only way to restrict traffic is by limiting weight allowed on the roadway.

Some on the County Council said they have seen signs limiting length, not weight.

Not in Maryland countered Public Works Director Scott Flanigan, who explained that Maryland follows the "Manual of Uniform Traffic Control Devices."

After some discussion, Flanigan said the signs on Kirk Road will include a supplemental message that notes the tight turns, explaining that the extra message should convince truck drivers not to take a chance on being able to negotiate the roadway.
